EDWARD STANLEY WATERS, IN CHARGE OF BRIC-A-BRAC COLLECTION.

THE EXHIBITION OF PICTURES OF THE EXPOSITION OF 1877 is composed of works contributed by well-known American artists, and a smaller number of good foreign pictures furnished by Eastern art dealers. It embraces the most extensive and important collection of water colors yet exhibited in the West, for which the Art Committee takes pleasure in acknowledging its obligations to the co-operation of the American Society of Painters in Water Colors.

Miss Rose Durfee, of New York, has acted as the agent of the Committee in the collection of pictures from New York artists and dealers, and will be in Chicago during the season of the Exhibition, as the representative of the Committee in conducting the sales.

All the pictures in the collection are for sale, (at private sale,) and the prices have, at the request of the Committee, been placed at low figures, in the hope that a large number may be sold and thus the success of future exhibitions of similar nature be assured.

The prices of the pictures may be obtained from Miss Durfee, or at the desk of the Clerk of the Committee.

Gallery A contains Oil Paintings, Nos. 1 to 102.

Gallery B contains Oil Paintings, Nos. 201 to 287.

Gallery C contains Water Colors, Nos. 301 to 423.

Gallery D contains Water Colors and Oil Paintings, Nos. 424 to 452.

Gallery E contains Oil Paintings, Nos. 453 to 546.

Gallery F contains Water Colors and Oil Paintings, Nos. 551 to 605.

The Special Exhibition Room contains three large historical paintings.

The medals mentioned, unless otherwise specified, were granted at the Expositions and Salons of Paris.

HISTORICAL PAINTINGS.

Roman Chariot Race,

Alex. Wagner.

Alexander Wagner was born at Pesth, the capital of Hungary, April 16, 1838, graduated at the Real-Gymnasium of his native city, and at the age of nineteen entered the Academy of Fine Arts at Vienna. The next year he entered the class of Prof. Carl Piloty in the Royal Academy of Munich, and in 1866, at the age of 28, was elected a professor in the Munich institution. The great work of his life is the "Chariot Race," which he painted for the Vienna Exposition, and then reproduced in grander proportions for the Centennial Exposition. The scene represents the close of an exciting race in the presence of the Emperor Domitian in the Circus Maximus at Rome, with all the beauty and wealth of the time.

William the Silent, Prince of Orange, pawning his jewels, to carry on the War of the Netherlands,

Claudius Jacquand.

A native of Lyons, France. Medal of second class, 1824; of first class, 1836;
Cross of the Legion of Honor, 1839.

Motley, the historian of the Dutch Republic, has ably portrayed the noble character of William, Prince of Orange. In the second volume, in the account of the terrible campaign in the Netherlands of the Duke of Alva, at the head of the Spanish army, the historian vividly describes the heroism and devotion of the patriot leader in the Provinces. The country had been devastated, the Prince was proscribed, his property declared confiscated, the people were terror-stricken and paralyzed. Realizing the necessity of upholding the national cause, William sought to rally once more the people around the patriotic standard. A modest but lofty courage moved him, and selling his jewels, his plate, his furniture, which were almost of regal magnificence, with unbroken spirit,—“he hazarded all his possessions, his luxury, his fortune, his family, his life, his children, with the calm conviction of a statesman.” Three times in this terrible and unequal war did William raise money for the payment of his army by the pawning and the sale of his personal effects.

This picture represents the assembling of William, his family, and his tried adherents, in his own home, to negotiate a sale to the Jewish bankers and brokers. Before them are spread the household treasures, and, while anxious for their assistance, the Prince protests, with calm dignity, against the extortions of the money lenders. The painting was formerly in the possession of the late King of Holland, and at his death was sold with other personal effects.

Shakespeare Reading. From the Death-mask at Darmstadt.

William Page.

William Page, the artist, was born January 23, 1811, in Albany, New York, and while quite a young man commenced portrait painting in New York. From 1850 to 1861 he painted in Europe, devoting much time to the examination of the technical processes of Titian. Elected, in 1871, President of the National Academy of Design, his two famous works are “The Head of Christ,” and the present picture finished for the Centennial Exposition, upon which he was engaged for over seven years.

William Shakespeare, born in Stratford-upon-Avon, in April, 1564, died there April 23, 1616. His accredited portraits are the Stratford bust upon his tomb, finished by Gerard Johnson before 1623, the copper-plate engraving by Martin Droeshout, published in 1623, and the Chandos oil portrait, now in the National Portrait Gallery at London.

A death-mask made in 1616, the date of Shakespeare's death, belongs to Dr. Ernest Becker of Hesse-Darmstadt, which, after years study of the subject and critical examination of the cast itself, Mr. Page is convinced was taken from the face of the dramatist. In 1847, Ludwig Becker, a portrait painter, bought a miniature painting, dated 1637, of a head upon a bier, which had belonged to the Kesselstadt family for over a century. In 1849, he discovered the original death-mask for the painting at Mayence, and left it for eleven years with Prof. Owen, who could not complete a chain of evidence warranting its purchase for the British Museum. Mr. Page holds that the Darmstadt cast was the original guide to Johnson in preparing the bust on the tomb, and should be accepted as the only authoritative guide to the actual appearance of the poet. His views are ably set forth in an essay in Scribner's Monthly for September, 1875.
